Byrnes Wants Big 4 Meeting

U. S. SECRETARY URGES SESSION CALLED AT ONCE

Small Powers Praise Stand On Two-Thirds Vote At Peace Confab

PARIS, Aug. 5—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes urged today that the big four council of foreign ministers meet here simultaneously with the peace conference so recommendations on treaties can be taken up as they arise. Byrnes appealed to the other members of the big four to agree to the simultaneous meetings of the foreign ministers and the peace conference as a means of facilitating the work of both. Byrnes made his proposal after the little countries trained their oratorical big guns on the two-thirds rule for conference decisions. They denounced the rule undemocratic and pleaded with the big powers to allow recommendations for treaty changes by a simple majority.

The small powers praised an earlier disclosure by Byrnes that he would support any conference recommendation made by a two-thirds vote, in effect forsaking the big four veto.

At a meeting of the rules committee opening the second week of the conference, W. J. Jordan of New Zealand called on the big powers and all nations to stop talking about democracy if the two-thirds rule were to be imposed on this conference. He said it would prevent the conference from doing anything, and the delegates might as well go home now if it is upheld.

Brazil and The Netherlands strongly supported New Zealand, while Yugoslavia and Poland spoke early in favor of the two-thirds vote.

Byrnes' appeal for simultaneous meetings here was in support of the first appeal of such nature made last week in a plenary session of the conference by Prime (Continued on Page Two)

Left-Over War Fund Accounting Sought

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—The House appropriations committee is checking budget records to find out how much the administration spent last year out of more than $64,000,000,000 in left-over war funds, it was reported today.

Rep. Ben Jensen, R., Ia., a committee member, said the administration spent money from the war balances, "and we're going to find out how much."

"That money should be put back in the treasury," he said. "We took back $64,000,000,000 last year, there still was left in unexpended balances more than we re-claimed."

Jensen and other Republicans hotly disputed President Truman's weekend report that he could not balance the budget this year. The Republicans charged that the administration could put government finances in the black simply by cutting federal operating expenses.

Mr. Truman, in revised budget estimates, said the federal government would suffer a $1,900,000,000 deficit during the fiscal year ending next June 30. This, however, was far less than the $4,500,000,000 deficit he anticipated when he made his original budget estimates in January.

Mr. Truman raised his estimates for both government receipts and expenditures for the current fiscal year. In January, he estimated expenditures for the fiscal year would be $36,000,000,000, but now he thinks they will be about $41,500,000,000. In January, he said the year's receipts probably would be $31,500,000,000. (Continued on Page Two)

TRUMAN STAYS OUT OF FIGHT

President Avoids Contacts On Bitter Primary Election Battle

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Aug. 5—President Truman carefully avoided any direct contact today with the bitter fifth district congressional campaign which winds up in tomorrow's Democratic primary.

Although Mr. Truman had openly aligned himself with Enos A. Axtell who was opposing the incumbent Rep. Roger C. Slaughter, D., Mo., for re-nomination, the chief executive was playing hands off when it came to overt participation in the race.

As far as was known, Mr. Truman's only contact with the Axtell forces was Saturday when he arrived from Washington. James Pendergast, boss of the Democratic faction supporting Axtell, chatted with the chief executive for a few minutes on the front lawn of the Truman home at Independence. Since then, Mr. Truman has devoted most of his time to his family. He planned to drive to Grandview to visit his 93-year-old mother, Mrs. Martha E. Truman, for the third time since he arrived in Independence. Last night, the President, his wife and daughter (Continued on Page Two)

COP WONDERS IF HE SHOULD PUT IN NEW WINDOW

LORAIN, O., Aug. 5—City Patrolman Leo Matuszak wondered today if he should "put in a new window" or just mark it up to experience.

The officer saved a baby from possible suffocation when he broke a window ventilator of a car parked in downtown Lorain. The baby, muffled in a blanket, had fallen on the floor of the car.

The baby's father met Matuszak a few minutes later and demanded: "How about putting in a new window?"

MAY'S HEALTH DEBATE TOPIC

Mead Schedules Meeting With Attorney General On Court Action

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—Physicians for Rep. Andrew J. May, D., Ky., today were reported in dispute over the condition of the 71-year-old congressman under subpoena to testify before the senate war investigating committee.

May has gone quietly to his home in Prestonsburg, Ky., where his family physician, Dr. John Archer, reported his condition may be called "critical." Washington physicians, however, were understood to feel that May was recovering normally and probably would be able to testify before the committee before long.

"I have been his doctor for 14 years and right now Mr. May is in the worst physical condition in which I ever have seen him," Dr. Archer said. "I'd want to see a great improvement in Mr. May before I would let him sit up."

(May needs absolute quiet and complete rest, the physician added. He described May's illness as a "heart ailment coupled with a general circulatory collapse.") (All visitors except members of the immediate family were barred from his room at his home.) May originally was scheduled to appear before the committee more than a week ago, but his testimony was delayed when he suffered a severe heart attack. Committee Chairman James M. Mead, D., N. Y., will hear May's attorney, Warren Magee, report on the congressman's condition Friday.

Mead indicated the committee would consider enforcing the subpoena for May to testify unless medical evidence shows that he still is too ill.

NO POLIO HERE; COUNTY IS FREE OF QUARANTINES

Wave of infantile paralysis which is reported spreading over the middle west has not struck Pickaway county. Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, said Monday no cases of poliomyelitis have been reported in Pickaway county.

Dr. Blackburn disclosed that at the present time there are no quarantined illnesses of any kind in the county.

Cases of infantile paralysis have been reported during the past few days in Ross, Franklin and other nearby counties.

Reports show that polio is on the increase in many communities in the midwest.

He said the atom-producing energy at Oak Ridge—home of the atom bomb—would not be merely an experimental sample, but a

79TH CONGRESS AIDED FARMERS SURVEY SHOWS

'Abundant Production and Abundant Consumption' Aim Of Solons

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—The 79th congress dealt generously with the farmer, a survey showed today.

In addition to getting him higher prices through subsidies and ceiling price boosts, congress passed new laws to increase the farmer's market and enable millions of tenant farmers to become farm owners.

Rep. Clifford R. Hope, Kans., ranking Republican on the house agriculture committee, said the dominant philosophy behind most of congress' farm legislation during the past two years has been the desire to secure "abundant production and abundant consumption."

"The farmers showed in the war that there is no limit to what they can produce," he said. "The question now is finding a place to put the stuff they turn out." One of the most important measures for that purpose is an act greatly increasing the agriculture department's research activities. Congress authorized the spending of millions of dollars to:

1. Develop new agricultural commodities as well as new uses for old ones, like cotton, which is meeting stiff competition from synthetics.

2. Provide marketing research on how to get farm products quickly and economically to the consumer. This will include experimentation with packaging, freezing and dehydration.

Farm leaders also backed permanent establishment of the school lunch program as a means of ex- (Continued on Page Two)

20 CIO PICKETS ARRESTED AS PLANT REOPENS

CONNERSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 5—Twenty men were arrested today as several hundred employees of the strikebound Rex manufacturing company returned to work under the eyes of about 300 state guardsmen and troopers.

"Minor disorders" were reported. Nearly 200 state guardsmen and more than 100 state troopers were stationed at the plant entrance. The men were jailed for picketing in violation of a court order.

State police said no one was injured. The plant reopened at 7 a. m. under a circuit court order restraining picketing. Gov. Ralph F. Gates mobilized units of the state guard to prevent violence after local authorities had feared they would be unable to cope with the situation.

The jailed men were identified as CIO union pickets. The guardsmen reached Connorsville about two hours before plant opening time and were held in readiness for any trouble.

Faster Not Sure Ordeal Worth Effort

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5—Claude L. Baxter hasn't had a bite to eat for 75 days.

He said today he isn't sure his self-imposed fast, which he won't break until he ends his 100th day, will be worth the effort unless it brings in more money to feed starving Europeans.

So far, his refusal to eat has prompted the people of the United States to turn over $47 to buy food for the starving.

"Of course, I don't know how much money I've moved people to give to organized campaigns, but unless I hear about more than the $47 that's already been sent my way, I'm not sure it will be worth it," Baxter said.

It was May 22 at about 8 p. m., when Baxter, a 41-year-old retired chef, pushed back his dinner plate and announced to his wife, Florence, a real estate broker, that he wasn't going to eat another bite for 100 days.

He had been reading his evening newspaper and wanted to do something that would make the people of the U. S. think about starvation and do something to relieve it.

Baxter got a local bank to agree to hold any contributions he might get until he could designate an organization to disburse the money. He also sought a sponsor (Continued on Page Two)

Bradley Says Unscrupulous Persons Take Advantage Of Aid To Veterans

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 5—Veterans Administrator Gen. Omar N. Bradley warned today that the on-the-job training program for veterans threatens a national scandal involving millions in federal funds.

He said that reports of "irregularities" have reached his office recently but that even without these "it is apparent that something is wrong."

"From the outset, unscrupulous persons lost no time in taking advantage of veterans training on the job," Bradley told members of the United Spanish War Veterans at their 48th National encampment here. "The dishonest employer and the unthinking veteran have already infected the program in many states."

Something is wrong, he said, when it takes three years to learn to be a stock clerk in one state and three months in another and when training establishments lower the beginning wage of its trainees by an amount equal to their subsistence allowance.

He said both employers and veterans were resorting to "trick (Continued on Page Two)

COLUMBUS, Aug. 5—Gov. Frank J. Lausche said today he would call legislative leaders to set a date for a fourth special session of the state legislature to consider three urgent legislative proposals.

Lausche said the call would include requests for legislation to:

1. Increase state aid to aged and blind to match additional federal funds;

2. Create a salary study commission for the ensuing biennium; and

3. Create a commission to study tax revenues and their distribution.

LITTLE KNOWN ABOUT TREMBOR IN CARIBBEAN

Towering Wave Smashes On Dominican Republic Shores Is Report

WIDE AREA FEELS TREMOB

Seismographs Record One Of Greatest Quakes In Many Decades

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic, Aug. 5—A mighty Caribbean earthquake spanning a 600-mile stretch of the West Indies has piled a towering tidal wave onto the northern shore of Santo Domingo, already battered by earth shocks, fragmentary reports disclosed today.

The tidal wave hit Puerto Plata a seaport of 4,500 population on the northern shore of the Dominican republic, and rolled a considerable distance inland.

Shattered communications delayed reports on the casualties and damage.

Five towns on or near the northern Dominican shore, including Puerto Plata, suffered severe blows from the earthquake which struck Sunday. Earthquake damage was said to extend all along the northern edge of Santo Domingo island, in both the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

Ciudad Trujillo, on the southern shore, was thrown into a near panic when the earth trembled again slightly at 4:49 p. m. The city felt the afternoon shock only slightly.

The earthquake, recorded by seismographs throughout the world, was one of the greatest in decades. Apparently its epicenter was somewhere in the Caribbean depths. This presumably prevented a loss of life comparable to those suffered in other 20th century Caribbean upheavals which struck heavily populated areas.

Earth tremors were felt in Cuba, which lies to the west of Santo Domingo, and in Puerto Rico, to the east. Dispatches from Chile reported minor tremors in Valparaiso and Santiago, apparently part of the same upheaval.

The five Dominican towns known to be hard hit were Puerto Plata, Santiago, Moca, Macoris and San Francisco. The other four towns are clustered short distances inland from Puerto Plata.

In Moca, the city hall and church collapsed in ruins. Many stores and homes were destroyed.

INDIANA MAN GIVES UP WHILE POSSE SEARCHES

ROCHESTER, Ind., Aug. 5—While state police, three sheriffs and 50 civilians with shotguns searched the countryside, a 41-year old car dealer sought for three days for the street-corner shooting of his wife, surrendered quietly to two farmers today.

Lester Nichols, who left his estranged wife, Nora, 43, lying wounded on an Akron, Ind., street and fled into nearby woodlands, Friday night, appeared suddenly this morning two miles from the huckleberry marsh where authorities thought he was trapped.

Farmer Ernest Roberts said Nichols strolled up to his well house and asked for a drink of water. A few minutes later he agreed to permit Roberts and Foster Huffman to bring him to the Fulton county jail here.

"No use to try to get away," Nichols said, "I should have given up right away." He said he had thrown away his rifle last night. Searchers had been warned that Nichols had two guns.

Police were aided by Nichols' 23-year-old son, Melvin, who told them his father came out of the swamp late yesterday to the home of a friend bordering the marsh area.

The youth said he shot at his father twice "for trying to kill my mother," and that the elder Nichols went limping back into the swampland. Nichols said he was not hit by the shot.

Summers said Nichols inquired about his wife's condition. "She's the finest little woman in the world," he said.

U. S., British Salvage Crews Battle Over Prize

LONDON, Aug. 5—A British sea captain charged today that an American boarding party ordered his men off the crippled freighter, American Farmer, struck the British ensign, hoisted an American flag and made off with the ship, a $4,500,000 salvage prize.

Capt. E. Miller, a hardbitten 65-year-old veteran of the sea, wirelessed the Hudson Steamship Company, Ltd., his owners, that his salvage party had been ejected from the American Farmer by a boarding party of the American Ranger, a sister ship of the crippled Farmer.

Miller and his owners immediately advised the admiralty which assured the British shipping men that it was making a full inquiry into the case.

The American destroyer, Perry, was reported standing by, observing the salvage battle between the rival crews.

Miller reported that he won the race to the crippled American Farmer which was damaged badly in a collision last week but remained afloat after passengers and crews had been taken off.

Miller, skipper of the 2,039-ton Elizabeth, put a prize crew aboard the derelict, hoisted the British ensign and prepared to tow the craft 700 miles to Britain.

However, he said, a few hours later the American destroyer, Perry, and the American Ranger hove into sight.

Miller displayed the signal:

"Hands off. This prize is mine."

Miller charged that the American Ranger ignored his signal and (Continued on Page Two)

REWARD OFFERED IN PUZZLING BURGLARY CASE

Reward of $100 has been posted for information leading to the apprehension of thieves who burglarized three Pickaway county farm homes. This announcement was made Monday by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

The burglaries, all committed on the afternoon of July 28, constitute the most puzzling triple-crime in the county's history, the sheriff said. The homes ransacked are those of W. C. Pontius, Walnut township, and David Jinks and Chester Ward, in Madison township.

Although dresses, jewelry, and other articles were stolen, the burglars handled but failed to steal $250 in currency. At the Pontius home the thieves took the door of the electric refrigerator. Part of the door was recovered by the sheriff and his deputies in a woods three-fourths of a mile away, and about two miles along the road the second half of the door was found in a field.

Minister W. L. MacKenzie King of Canada.

Byrnes statement was made at the rules committee meeting where he reiterated his pledge to vote in the council of foreign ministers for any conference recommendation receiving a two-thirds vote.

"I am not afraid of this conference, and now that we have called it, we should be willing to listen to it," he said.

Byrnes announced he would vote for a British compromise amendment on voting procedure. It would provide for two types of recommendations to the big four council—those getting a simple majority and those getting a two-thirds vote.

He expressed his willingness to change his vote in the big four council, which will write the final peace treaties for the axis satellites, and to take on the job of persuading the United States to support him in any change recommended by a two-thirds vote.

But Byrnes admitted frankly that he could not do that on recommendations receiving a simple majority. He said he could foresee the possibility of a proposal getting a simple majority for which he would be unable to get a two-thirds senate ratification.

Byrnes' statement came near the end of the morning debate over voting procedure. In supporting the British compromise proposal, Byrnes said it recognized the principle of the two-thirds rule which was followed by many international conferences and in the United Nations assembly, and also made it possible for views receiving a simple majority to be placed before the big four council.

He pledged himself to give the most careful consideration in the big four council to proposals receiving a simple majority.

Byrnes said he recognized the validity of the argument that it would be almost impossible to get a two-thirds vote here to change any of the big four agreements, because the big powers had agreed to stick by their previously taken position.

But, he added, there are 26 broad categories of issues on which the big four still disagree and on which none of them is committed. He then re-explained his abandonment of the veto in the big four on issues getting a two-thirds vote, and indirectly appealed to the other big four members to do likewise.

Byrnes' assertions climaxed a morning session at which Brazil, Holland, New Zealand and Belgium joined South Africa, which opened the debate Saturday for a majority rule.

The President, in seeking a "substantial budget surplus" for the next fiscal year, repeated his stand against further tax reductions until the threat of inflation has passed.

This drew a quick endorsement from Chairman Walter F. George, D., Ga., of the senate finance committee, which handles tax legislation in the senate. George said an immediate reduction in individual or corporate taxes was impossible because of government expenditures which he described as "entirely too high."

The first seven days' fasting were the hardest, from the standpoint of hunger, he said.

"Since then, I don't have any appetite anyway."

After 75 days, a typical day is as follows:
Read newspapers and books until fall asleep around 4:30 a. m., awaken around 10 a. m., work jigsaw puzzles, write letters and see visitors—about 35 a day—feed "Dickie," the pet canary, maybe go for an evening drive with Mrs. Baxter, prepare Mrs. Baxter's dinner, drink glass of wine while she eats, listen to the radio, then start reading again.

Baxter calculates that he has consumed 225 gallons of coffee, at three gallons a day, since starting his fast. He drinks two bottles of wine and smokes two-and-a-half packages of cigarettes daily. He smoked half a package a day before the fast began.

When he resumes eating, his doctor told him, he will get small servings of liquids, jello and cereal about every hour until he gets used to the idea of eating again.

In a large western department store, Bradley said, both the advertising and sales managers applied for job training. One—the president's son drawing a salary of $700 monthly—was training for the president's job. The other, drawing $600, was training for the vice-presidency.

"These trick practices stand in danger of besmirching a program that can offer honest and useful training to thousands of veterans who need it," the VA administrator said.

panding food consumption through greater knowledge of nutrition, and legislation aimed at increasing foreign trade to provide more markets for farm products.

Along with these "full production" bills congress passed a measure designed to enable millions of tenant farmers and sharecroppers to become farm owners through a new program of government-insured loans similar to federal housing administration loans.

The measure is held to promise great advances in soil conservation since farmers are more likely to take care of their land if they own it themselves.

The perennial efforts of some elements of the farm group to secure still higher prices through a revision of the parity formula to include labor costs again were unsuccessful. New proposals for revising parity undoubtedly will be made in the next congress.

Two other important measures that failed to clear the 79th congress will be brought up again in the 80th. One is a bill to regulate the newer and more potent weed and insect poisons. It probably will become law next year.

According to White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, the President has no plans to see Axtell, nor has he seen him. The impression gained from this was that Mr. Truman said all he was going to say about Axtell versus Slaughter at a recent news conference in Washington. And this hands-off attitude was reflected in all of the President's plans.

For the first time since he has come home as President, Mr. Truman planned no visit to his office in the Kansas City federal building. He was sticking close to his big, white frame house in Independence. And about the only people he was talking to were members of his family, or neighbors.

The fact that internal revenue officials were on the conference list indicated that income tax prosecutions were under discussion.

Mead said the conversations will involve "persons who have either testified or have been named in the course of the hearings."

This left many possibilities as numerous Army officers, ex-officers and civilian contractors have been mentioned.

Mead also revived his committee's interest in the return of surplus property overseas.

"It appears that shipments from Europe of bulldozers, road scrapers and other machinery urgently needed here are slowing down," Mead said in explaining a conference he set for today with foreign liquidation commissioner Thomas B. McCabe.

He said a subcommittee may be appointed to check on surplus property disposals.

"In the Pacific, where they were scheduled to send everything back home for civilian use, I understand there is practically nothing moving. There is no shortage of shipping facilities now, and the committee wants to find out why this vital machinery is not being returned here at a time when it is needed," Mead said.

He added he would remain in Washington throughout August to prepare a report on the committee's investigations so far.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, 325 miles southeast of Puerto Plata, the earth shocks interrupted telephone and electric service for a short time, stopped clocks and awayed chandeliers. There was no report of damage or casualties.

(Passengers who arrived in Miami aboard a chartered plane from Mayaguez on the west side of Puerto Rico said they saw men "knocked down by the force of the quake.")

(Capt. Gordon J. Brakeman, Pan American Airways pilot who left San Juan shortly after the first shock, said upon his arrival in Miami, "It felt like someone was kicking us from side to side. When we took off it felt as though a tractor were behind the plane.")

The shocks were felt in Port au Prince, Haiti, at the western end of Santo Domingo.

OHIO FARMERS STILL USING OLD MACHINERY

Farm Bureau Expert Says New Equipment May Be Delayed A Year

Obsolete and worn farm machinery may have to be used through another year, according to L. S. Walton, head of the farm machinery division of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus. In view of this, he appealed to farmers to reconition their tools for the coming fall season.

Greatest need at the present time is for farm tractors, a recent poll among more than 2,500 farmers conducted by Farm Bureau Advisory Councils over the state, reveals. Judging from this sampling, more than one-fifth of the farmers in the state are in need of a tractor. Other tools rated high on the list of needed items.

"With the recent increase in price of farm equipment, farmers feel it wise to continue the operation of their old machinery," the poll reveals. "Only a few groups were in favor of buying new equipment under present conditions and prices. Farmers were very definitely opposed to going heavily in debt for machinery."

Harry Culbreth, Farm Bureau organization director who issued the report on the poll, pointed out that opinion was divided on the matter of buying and using farm machinery jointly. Chief objection to such a plan was that farmers felt that no one would be responsible for the care and repair of such machinery, he said.

Walton reports that repair parts will be more plentiful and urges farmers to order needed parts early. Any equipment that will again be drafted into service this fall should be thoroughly checked, he said, and needed repairs made before the rush season. Dealers will be able to secure parts if they are notified well in advance of time needed.

130 MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED HERE THIS YEAR

Marriage licenses issued during the first seven months of 1946 in Pickaway county showed an increase of 69 per cent over the total granted during the same period in 1945—proving that Dan Cupid is undismayed by the housing shortage and the high-cost-of-living in the postwar era.

A tabulation from the records in the Probate court, Monday, disclosed that from Jan. 1 to July 31, 1946, the number of marriage licenses issued totaled 130, as against only 77 during the corresponding period a year ago.

The increase was attributed by Probate court deputies chiefly to the marriages of war veterans returning to civilian life.

The number of licenses granted in July, 1946 was 25, as compared with only 18 in July, 1945.

USE OF FORESTS

THE shortage of newsprint has made American readers conscious of the importance of forest use in its relation to their getting news and interesting features in their favorite newspaper. The housing shortage has made all Americans think about forests in terms of lumber for building purposes. Some figures recently given out by Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph are surprising.

Of the average consumption of the forest, it says, the commercial cut accounts for 73.4 per cent. Devastation by fire, insects and disease cut the other 26.6 per cent—more than one-quarter of the year's using-up.

Taking the commercial cut, in turn, as 100 per cent, pulp and paper mills use only 22.7 per cent, or less than a fourth, while 30.9 per cent goes for fuel wood, 5.6 per cent for pulpwood exports and 40.8 per cent for lumber and miscellaneous products.

In other words, fire, insects and diseases take every year more than one-quarter of the trees used up, while the paper uses altogether take but one-sixth of the whole.

For too long all North Americans regarded forests as inexhaustible resources, to be used or abused in any wasteful manner with no dire results. Now it becomes plain that trees are a crop. Their life cycle is longer than that of wheat or hay, but it is a cycle, and its greatest length requires a higher degree of forethought in order to get the best possible return.

NINE SQUARE METERS

THE optimistic Russian architect directing the rebuilding of Stalingrad says proudly that by 1966 he hopes there will be nine square meters of living space for every person in that reviving city.

A meter is more than a yard—almost 40 inches. Three across the top would be about 10 feet, three down the side about the same. A room 10 by 10 for every person? Not so bad. But it isn't quite like that. The 10 by 10 must include that person's share of the common rooms, also. A room 10 by 20, for instance, across the front, will be living room, dining room and kitchen all in one. Across the back, two bedrooms, each 8 by 10, one for papa and mama, one for the two children, and there is 4 by 10 left for a bathroom. That's all. It's not so much space and privacy after all. But it's more than most Russians have ever had before. New houses are to have floors and central heating and running water—great innovations.

Americans have a right to gripe about their housing shortage, because our American standards are for comfortable living, and enough good small houses or apartments do not yet exist. But such comfort and space as an American takes for granted is as yet merely a dream of luxury to the Russian. He doesn't have those nine square meters yet. He merely hopes for them in 1966.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 5—All of the kids who envy the guys who lead orchestras ought to sit in for a few minutes with Carl Ravazza. If he were any more contented, a certain milk company would have him out to pasture. He doesn't lead a band any more.

"I've been living for the first time during the months in which I've been out of the band business," the singer said. "There's no more hopping around the country. I get a chance to stay in one spot for a while, have my days free to go out in my sailboat and loaf around."

"When you're a band leader you feel like you have the cares of the world on your shoulders. As a matter of fact you do—the cares of your own particular world, which happens to be the band. Musicians are always full of non-musical troubles of some kind and the leader usually gets involved one way or another. One of the main chores is serving as a banker. The boys are always getting broke in the middle of the week or sooner. Just keeping track of the advances is enough to keep you busy."

After playing in or leading bands since his school days, Ravazza was launched as a singing star about a year ago. Currently he is the headliner at the Versailles club. After that comes a long return engagement at the Roxy theater and then, possibly, Hollywood, if his agent thinks he's ready for the best possible deal. Twentieth Century-Fox holds the strings to Ravazza.

Anyone who spends more than $150,000 in producing a musical show during the present season should have his head examined. Costs are so high that the lavish musicals need $250,000 to $300,000 and you just can't get your money back, let alone make profits, at that scale. Reviews and intimate type book shows looks to be in order.

One of the $300,000 failures bowed out Saturday night after 75 performances. It is "Around the World" which Orson Welles put on. The luke-warm critical reception and the Summer doldrums combined to put it on the skids. Another closing, "The Glass Menagerie," had a much happier history—$1,300,000 happier. This Tennessee Williams play, which won the Critics Circle's 1945 award, has had 563 performances. The original company, headed by Laurette Taylor and Eddie Dowling will start touring about Oct. 14. Meanwhile, a second company, headed by Pauline Lord, now in rehearsal, will have opened Sept. 2 in Pittsburgh.

The practice of pinning ear-catching names on glamorous models seems to have reached a new high (or low, depending on how you view those things) in the case of one of the five candidates nominated for the balloting that will determine "Miss Rheingold 1947." The name, so help me, is Dulcet Tone.

MISSISSIPPI SLANT

CLAYTON Rand, a man from Mississippi, spoke to a group of bankers in St. Paul recently.

"The trouble with this country is over-education of the unintelligent. Nobody should be taught to read or write that can't think," he said.

Mr. Rand made one slight error with his speech. He forgot that he was not in Mississippi.

DIET AND HEALTH

So-Called "Gas on Stomach" Really a Controllable Habit

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

BELCHING is simply a bad habit. Moreover, it is an unnecessary one. Most of those who indulge in it believe themselves to be victims of "gas on the stomach." What actually happens, however, is not that gas is generated in the stomach but merely that certain individuals swallow a great deal of air. Then they belch to get rid of it.

Thus, we see that belchers really have two bad habits instead of one, swallowing air, and belching it up again.

Dr. Walter Cane of New York believes that if persons are able to breathe properly this twin habit of air swallowing and belching can be overcome. He directs his patients to breathe by taking short and not very deep breaths. Then they are taught to breathe over a more prolonged period. If desired, the patient may, after breathing out, not take a breath for several seconds.

Movements of Whispering

The object is to teach the patient to control the movements of whispering without making a sound. First comes practice in whispering. Then the same movements are made without saying words. The patient is then able to breathe in and breathe out with the same toneless noise that characterizes whispering. After the patient has learned to do this, he is taught to breathe in, in the normal way and to breathe out as he does in whispering. Next, he is directed to take short but not very deep breaths but to breathe outward in the way in which he has been practicing with the effect of a prolonged exhalation.

Short Practice

After a short period of practice, Dr. Cane has found that the patient feels safe breathing in this new way without attracting attention. If during the day, the patient feels some abdominal discomfort, he is directed to practice this new way of breathing. If this is done, there is no sensation of smothering and the belching habit usually disappears.

Dr. Cane has found this method effective in completely freeing people from the bad habit of belching. It has also been found useful in preventing distention or swelling of the stomach after operations.

It would seem that a method as simple as this would be well worth trying by those who have the bad habit of belching.

CONTRAST IN LEADS

THERE ARE two extremely contrasting types of opening leads, when considered from the broadest standpoint. One is conservative and the other venturesome. Whether to favor one of these or the other depends on many circumstances, but especially the kind of bidding which has been done. If the declarer seems to be in a contract which is likely to be difficult to make, you should lean toward care to prevent giving him the trick which may make his project successful. But if he and his partner did bidding which makes the contract seem very safe against normal defense, your job in rubber contract is to become aggressive—or should the word be offensive?—to strive for some trick which would come without conscious effort on your part.

That bidding sounded awful strong to West, as if the contract probably would be easy to make unless radical steps were taken at once. As to whether he was right or wrong, just notice what would have occurred if West had made any of his three possible conservative leads—his heart 7 to cut down ruffs by declarer's side in such a perfectly-fitting situation as this seemed to be, or the fourth-best card of either minor. If any of those leads had been made, the declarer would quickly have driven out the trump A, then the last two trumps, so that he could have lost nothing but a trick each in spades, hearts and clubs.

But West struck a blow for his own side, taking a risk—justifiable in the premises—of setting up an honor for South. He led his spade A and followed with the 3, in the hope that his partner would either win that or else manage to stop trumps on the first round. That latter hope was realized. When East got in with his heart A at the third trick, he returned a third spade for West to ruff. Gaining that trick fixed the side so that the later club K trick beat the contract.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
LATE IN the afternoon Charlie came in. She found Flo on the terrace.

"I was near here and I thought I'd take a chance on finding you home. Flo, you're not sick, are you?"

"Because I'm home?" laughed Flo.

"No. It's—you look a little pale!" Flo's face was pale and there were little shadows around her eyes but it was more a bleak look about her than Charlie noticed but could not define in words.

"I didn't sleep too well last night," said Flo.

"Oh, Doug went away last night, didn't he? I meant to telephone good-by."

Charlie sat down on the cushioned glider opposite Flo. "It would have been nice if you could have gone with Doug. Didn't any wives go?"

"I don't know, and I'd have hated it!" said Flo quickly. "That's a new dress, isn't it?"

Charlie straightened her shoulders in the new dress. "Yes. Blue, of course! I did want another color, for a change, but Mother liked this best—she bought it for me yesterday, at Tregler's."

Flo smiled. "Mother's to go on buying your clothes? What a snip! How does Trent like that?"

"He hasn't seen the dress yet. Anyway..." Charlie spoke with unvoiced spirit, "he can't object to Mother's giving me a few things—after all, she's still my mother! But I know he won't mind—Trent's a lot more understanding than you think he is!"

"If I've thought of all, it's that he's got a lot of pride," observed Flo.

"Then wouldn't he like all the more to see me dressed well?" Flo shook her head, gave a laugh. "It doesn't add up but it's your home-work, not mine!"

At the moment Charlie was too satisfied in the smooth course her own affairs were taking to resent Flo's mocking tone. She had just come from a second inspection of the Wingate apartments.

"Flo, we're moving—any day, now. Trent himself suggested it." For so it seemed to Charlie, now. "He realized it was awfully inconvenient, down there. And I can't invite anyone in and I loath that Mrs. Riggs—she watches everything I do!"

Flo murmured, "It's sweet—there's a strip of park and big, old trees and nice old houses..."

Charlie flushed. "It does look like that—when you first see it! And it was fun, for a while—but we didn't at any time plan to stay there long. Flo, I've been looking at those new apartments on Fairview. They're not too awfully expensive..."

"And Mother'll love to come across with the rent! Furnish it for you, too!" Flo sprang up from her chair. "You're a little fool! You're riding for a fall! And throwing away your best chance of happiness while you're doing it!"

For a moment Charlie's face was as pale as Flo's, and her eyes held doubt. Then the color came swiftly back. She retorted, "I don't think you're the one to talk of throwing away chances at happiness! After what you did!"

"Couldn't that be why I know?" asked Flo wearily. She dropped down again into her chair, let her head rest against it, and closed her eyes.

Charlie regarded her with sudden concern and some pity. "It's that other man," she thought. Aloud she said, a little hesitantly, "Flo, can't you forget—that man?"

"His name is Dan, if you're going to talk about him. Doctor Daniel Colburn. And, no, I can't forget him." She said it tonelessly and without opening her eyes.

Charlie's face grew more troubled. "Does Doug know?"

Flo said, in the same dull tone in which she had spoken before. "No. I was going to tell him the other night but he started talking about this commission."

"But what will you do?" persisted Charlie, her anxiety giving her courage.

Flo roused. "The first thing I've got to do..." Her eyes, wide open now, were on the space of the garden; she seemed not to be speaking to Charlie so much as to herself.

"...is to earn some money! You can't save your pride when you haven't a cent of your own!"

"Flo, you don't mean—you'd leave Doug?"

It sprang to Flo's lips to retort, "He's left me." She caught it back, said, instead, "It'd be more decent, wouldn't it?"

"Flo, Doug's different! Everyone respects him so—he's sort of in the public eye. You can't think of it happening to him, as if he were just an ordinary man..." She stopped, hearing herself floundering but the distress on her face deepened. "It'll make Mother awfully unhappy!"

Flo laughed, now. "We're back to Mother, are we? Yes, she'll see it a star gone from her banner of successful achievement and that'll make her miserable. She won't think about me!"

She saw Charlie's lips open to speak and she threw out her hands. "For heaven's sake, let's not get into a scrap over it! I haven't said I was going to—so probably it'll be nothing, in the end! Run along, now. Glad to have seen you but I've got to bathe and dress—I'm having company for dinner."

Charlie was glad to go. But as she moved to go she asked, her face and voice troubled, "Flo, not Cole Giddings?"

"Why not? He's very amusing. And he's very fond of me. But you needn't look like that—it happens it's Neil Winslow coming tonight."

Charlie wasn't reassured. She said, quickly, "Flo, you won't tell her? She'd put it in her book!"

Then, "I didn't know you knew her. Mother never said so, but I think she'd rather neither of us knew her."

"We're very good friends!" Flo said it to see the alarm deepen on Charlie's face but she found a heartening comfort in hearing herself declare it. "I met her at Alida's—Cole brought her there. They're old friends. You see, Mother and you and the universe! Why don't you and Trent come tonight, too? I think he'd like Neil Winslow. They speak the same language..."

"Trent may be late tonight," said Charlie, a little importantly. Her face took the glow it had worn when she came in. "He is doing some special stories. It's going to be awfully exciting when they come out—they'll be under his name. The first may be in tonight's paper."

"So Trent is going places!"

"Yes," affirmed Charlie on a high, proud breath. Then with a quick "By" and lift of her hand she went away.

Flo did not go up at once to bathe and dress. She sat on in her chair, a little tense, thinking of Charlie's horror at the idea of her leaving Doug. "Doug is different!" But after a moment she sprang to her feet with an angry impatience at herself. She had herself to think about...

She opened the door to Neil

Winslow when she came. Flo had not seen Neil since the afternoon at the Warwick, yet at once she was feeling the warm liking for her which she had felt then.

Neil had brought an evening paper with her. "Seen the Star tonight?"

"No. Anna's probably put it in Doug's study."

"Trent Renner has a story in it—front page. Looks like the beginning of a crusade against some dirty work in your Council. The boy's got a punch in his writing! And evidently he isn't afraid to crash in where most would pussy-foot!"

"No, he wouldn't be afraid," agreed Flo, smiling, because it put her first impression of Trent into words.

Neil put the paper on the coffee table. "Well, good luck to him! Usually a thing like this is shushed almost as soon as it is started. What have you been doing since I saw you?"

"Not much." Flo hesitated to speak of the day she had spent with Cole Giddings. "Doug was getting ready to go..." She stopped, feeling that this woman's uncanny perception must hear the false note in that.

As Anna served dinner she looked at Neil Winslow with an expression that said there'd never been anyone like her before! As soon as the door closed on her Neil Winslow said, a little excitedly, "I had a brilliant idea, a few moments ago! It's this... I'm going on a little jaunt, starting tomorrow. I'll be gone about a week. Why don't you come along with me?"

Flo cried instantly, "Oh, I'd adore to!" The pleasure of a week with this new friend unfolded before her in bright prospect. She laughed. "I'll go anywhere, but where are you going?"

"To Midland, Ohio."

"Midland?" Flo's voice flattened with disappointment.

"I was afraid you'd feel like that. But I've rented a jalopy. I'm going there to see your mother's background for myself. I've missed something, somewhere. And I've a hunch I may find it there in Midland."

Flo wasn't interested in her mother's story. She was thinking, "A week anywhere away from here..."

"I'll go."

Neil Winslow lowered her voice. "I'm not telling your mother about this particular research. I've an idea she wouldn't like it. Can you get away without letting her know where you're going?"

Flo gave a little laugh. "She never expects anything but that from me!"

"You can make an early start? Say eight o'clock? I've figured the mileage—that'd get us to Midland around noon, next day."

"I can be ready any time you say. Though, I'll have to cash a check somewhere."

Doug's money. "I've put a thousand dollars more in your account..." Her face burned.

"You needn't do that—you're going as my guest! That is, if you won't mind my gypsy way of traveling. Why, you must consent to be my guest, to save my face!"

"Save mine," thought Flo swiftly, gratefully, as she agreed to the other's insistence.

After dinner they studied a road map which Neil had brought in her handbag. And just following the curving red and blue lines on the map, Flo had the feeling of going far away. Of escape.

Smithsonian to Obtain
Frock From First Lady

Museum Has Dresses
Of Presidential Wives

By AUSTINE CASSINI
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—First Lady of the Land Bess Truman will soon give away one of her very best frocks... It will be put in a glass case, to be ogled by posterity as a "typical garment" of the Truman administration!

The dress is to be presented to the Smithsonian's National Museum, where it will become part of one of the most popular exhibits owned by them. Every first lady, from Martha Washington to Eleanor Roosevelt, has a dress or other piece of clothing on display. The 34 gowns, a "fashion show" spanning almost two centuries, fill an entire hall, are always surrounded by visitors.

WHAT ABOUT THE PRESIDENTS who were widowers? Or the sole bachelor occupants of the White House? Their administrations are represented by clothing once worn by their official hostesses. No less than 10 of our presidents whose wives were dead or seriously ill, designated a daughter, niece or sister as chateleine of the White House.

Thomas Jefferson, whose wife died about 15 years before he became president of the United States, brought his 29-year-old daughter, Mary Jefferson Randolph, with him as hostess.

Andy Jackson had two official hostesses during his two terms. Emily Donelson, his youthful niece, was first. Her death in 1836 during her uncle's administration, left a void, which was filled by Sarah Yorke Jackson, the president's daughter-in-law. Sarah was 30 years old when she became official White House hostess.

Austine Cassini

Just a few years later, while Martin Van Buren occupied the executive mansion, his son, Abram, married. And Abram's bride, Sarah Angelica Van Buren, was made official hostess.

FIRST LADY FOR ONLY A MONTH was Jane Irwin Findlay, who hosted for William Henry Harrison in the short period he held office... President Harrison died of pneumonia brought on by overwork one month after his inauguration.

His own wife, then about 60 years old, had been considered too aged for the strenuous journey from Ohio to Washington. So Mrs. Findlay took over as hostess. Her daughter was married to William Harrison, Jr. Folk in those days marveled at her energy—when Mrs. Findlay moved into the White House she was 72!

ONE OF THE MOST STRIKING GOWNS in the group is the dead black one which belonged to Jane Appleton Pierce, wife of President Franklin Pierce.

Just two months before they went to live in the White House, the Pierces lost their only son, and Mrs. Pierce was mourning during the entire administration. She only attended the inaugural ball for her husband's sake, and the black dress she wore there is now a part of the collection.

TO PRESERVE THEM, the models are kept in dustproof cases. And to prevent fading, they are never allowed near direct sunlight. Periodically, a curator opens the cases and rearranges the folds in the garments. For if the material hangs too long in one position, it may become permanently creased, and thus susceptible to splitting.

ACCORDING TO MARGARET BROWN in the museum's division of history, pure dye silk will last almost indefinitely if it's well taken care of and not subjected to undue strain. The oldest gown, for example—a salmon pink taffeta worn by Martha Washington—is in an excellent state of preservation.

On the other hand, if the silk is impure, deterioration will be noticeable in 20 to 30 years. The museum has put seamstresses to work on those dresses which were found to be other than pure dye silk.

Dean White arrived Monday morning from Hollywood, California, for a visit with his father T. W. White and brothers, Donald and Howard.

According to a news release from Liberty Films, Incorporated, White has been signed to a seven-year contract by Liberty Films although he has appeared but once before the cameras.

Dean, recently discharged from the Navy with the rank of lieutenant, was spotted by William Wyler, vice president of Liberty Films, who immediately cast him in an important role in "The Best Years of Our Lives", which Wyler is directing for Samuel Goldwyn to fulfill a previous commitment.

Wyler, impressed with White's appearance and ability invited other members of Liberty Films, Frank Capra, George Stevens and Samuel J. Briskin, to view rushes in which White appeared and the contract resulted. He did so well in his first picture that he is already in great demand for several loan outs and his next assignment will

FELLER LAID UP WITH BACKACHE MAY MISS GOALS

Squeeze Play Beats Reds And Dodgers Stretch Lead Over Cards

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 — Bobby Feller, baseball's human gold mine, was laid up with muscle miseries today which may spoil his chances to set a new modern strikeout record unless he recovers in time to take his regular pitching turn. The Cleveland Indian fire-ball star won't be the only one hurt if he is out for any length of time. In a very tangible manner, he has established himself as the game's number one box-office attraction, and any lengthy absence definitely would put a crimp in gate receipts, wherever the Indians play.

With Feller the principal attraction, an all-time major league record crowd of 74,529 squeezed into Cleveland's municipal stadium yesterday only to see the Iowa playboy take himself out of a 0 to 0 ball game with the Yankees in the seventh after he had given up only four hits and struck out seven.

The Yankees went on to win the game, 2 to 0, pushing across both runs in the ninth when pinch-hitter Nick Etten singled off relief hurler Bob Lemon with the bases loaded. Floyd Bevens gained his 12th victory, a four-hitter.

Before Feller strained a back muscle, he had brought his strikeouts to 246, just 87 shy of the 343 mark set by Rube Waddell of the 1904 Athletics. Feller, who also wants to be the first American leaguer to win 30 or more games since Grob Gove of the A's won 31 in 1931, can figure on about a dozen more starts, even if he goes every four days. With 20 wins to date, he would have to win 10 of the 12 and maintain a strikeout pace of more than eight per game to accomplish his aims.

As a gate attraction, Feller already has drawn 650,590 fans to the 27 games he has started for an average of 24,096 per game. At that rate, in 12 more appearances he would draw close to a million fans.

Baseball's other top pitching star, Hal Newhouser of the Tigers, also was handicapped by injuries yesterday as the slugging Boston Red Sox battled him out of the box in a 9 to 4 victory at Detroit. Led by Bobby Doerr, who hit two homers, one with the bases loaded, and a double to drive in seven runs, the Red Sox put on a 14-hit attack. Newhouser, idle nine days because of a nerve injury in his pitching arm, suffered his fourth defeat and his third at the hands of Boston. Mickey Harris, who held Detroit to five hits, one a Roy Cullenbine homer, won his 14th game.

Brooklyn increased its National League lead to two games, winning 5 to 4 from Cincinnati in the 14th when Pee Wee Reese squeeze-batted. Howie Schultz home. Schultz had doubled and advanced on an infield out.

Joe Medwick's 200th major league homer and his first this year gave the Dodgers three runs in a four-run seventh inning rally. Relief pitcher Hugh Casey was the winner.

The Cardinals lost ground by dividing at Philadelphia. They won the opener, 7 to 0, behind Murry Dickson's two-hit pitching and three-hit batting. Dickson, who led his team's 14 hit attack with two doubles and a single to drive in three runs, won his 10th game. George Kurowski hit a homer. Jim Tabor's 12th inning homer off Howie Pollet gave the Phils a 3 to 2 second game victory.

The Braves took over fourth place by defeating the Cubs at Boston, 6 to 5 and 6 to 4. Billy Herman driving in the deciding runs with nicely timed singles in each contest. Relief pitchers Jim Wallace and Ed Wright were the winners as the Braves came from behind to take each game.

The Giants, giving the Pirates a display of top-flight pitching by Mike Budnick and Monte Kennedy, won 4 to 0 and 10 to 1 decisions at New York. The Pirates made six hits in each game and the only damaging one was Frankie Gustine's homer off Kennedy in the nightcap. Willard Marshall and Goodwin Rosen hit giant homers. Buddy Blattner led a 20-hit second game Giant attack with five hits.

Tom Ferrick won two games.

COLONELS HALF GAME BACK OF AA LEADERS NOW

By United Press
Louisville, piling up three week-end victories, allied Indianapolis' lead in the close American Association race today to a scant half game.

As Indianapolis lost two out of three over the weekend, the Colonels triumphed three times in a row by one-point margins to improve their league standing by two full games.

Louisville squeezed past Kansas City twice yesterday, building an early lead to take the first game, 6 to 5, and slamming across two runs in the first of the ninth to win the second, 3 to 2. The Colonels defeated St. Paul Saturday, 5 to 4.

Meanwhile, Indianapolis lost to Minneapolis Saturday, 6 to 5, and split a doubleheader yesterday with St. Paul. Indianapolis batted out 15 hits in the first game yesterday to win easily, 13 to 2, and then lost in the 10-inning nightcap, 6 to 5.

St. Paul, whose recent comeback has carried the team into the thick of the pennant fight, trailed the league leaders by 3 1/2 games.

Minneapolis moved into a tie with Milwaukee for fourth place by pounding out three straight triumphs over the weekend. After defeating Indianapolis Saturday, the Millers beat Toledo in a doubleheader yesterday, 5 to 4 and 14 to 5.

Milwaukee, turning in a week-end record of one victory and two defeats, lost to Toledo Saturday, 4 to 2, and then split with Columbus in a double-header yesterday. Milwaukee won the first game, 6 to 5, and lost the second, 5 to 2.

With his relief pitching while Chet Laabs took care of the offensive chores in each contest as the Browns beat the Athletics, 6 to 5 and 7 to 4 at St. Louis. Ferrick, a Cleveland castoff, stopped late Philadelphia threats in each game, while Laabs doubled home the winning run in the ninth of the opener and his three run homer provided the victory margin in the second game.

The White Sox won their first double header since Ted Lyons took over as manager, defeating the Senators at Chicago, 3 to 1 and 1 to 0. Edgar Smith and Earl Caldwell collaborated in a five-hit first game triumph while Frank Papish went the route and scored his own winning run to win the second game. Papish singled in the third and eventually scored when Senator pitcher Early Wynn walked a batter with the bases loaded to nullify an otherwise good job.

PLAYERS MEET WITH OWNERS TO DISCUSS POLICY

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 — A major league baseball players' policy committee was scheduled to meet with an owners' committee today, with the players' suggestions for improvement of contracts and working conditions assured of sympathetic treatment by the owners.

Each league sent three players. Dixie Walker of Brooklyn, Billy Herman of Boston and Marty Marion of St. Louis represented the National League; Joe Kuhel of Chicago, Mel Harder of Cleveland and Johnny Murphy of the Yankees carried American League suggestions.

Listening for the owners were Larry MacPhail of the Yankees, Sam Breadon of the Cardinals, Phil Wrigley of the Cubs and Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox.

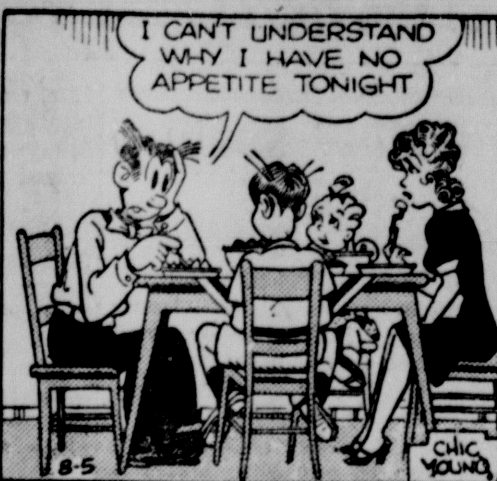

Chief among the players' proposals were revision of the 10-day clause, establishment of a minimum salary, setting up of a pension plan, and payment of expenses during Spring training. All were expected to be approved in some form by the owners, who set up the current negotiations as a counter-move to raids by the Mexican league and organization of players by the American Baseball Guild.

The White Sox won their first double header since Ted Lyons took over as manager, defeating the Senators at Chicago, 3 to 1 and 1 to 0.

Edgar Smith and Earl Caldwell collaborated in a five-hit first game triumph while Frank Papish went the route and scored his own winning run to win the second game. Papish singled in the third and eventually scored when Senator pitcher Early Wynn walked a batter with the bases loaded to nullify an otherwise good job.

ASLEEP IN THE DEEP
Mercedes McCambridge is guest star in a sea-sprayed blood-curdler, "Asleep in the Deep," on the "Inner Sanctum" murder mystery show, Monday, at 7 P.M. EST over CBS. Baneful and sneering Your Host, Paul McGrath, lures his audience into the chamber of horrors beyond the frightful portals of the squeaking door. Six men and women and a storm-tossed boat are the elements of this salty horror story, with a splash of the supernatural, which was written by Robert Sloat. Two cadavers are hurled to a watery grave in Davy Jones' locker; but the tossing sea yields up evidence which puts a clammy finger on the real killer.

TONIGHT ON BROADWAY
Jane Froman sings one of her most-requested songs, "Begin the Beguine," on "Tonight on Broadway," when it airs Monday at 9:30 p.m. The song will be heard as the "Hollywood Theater" episode of the program's "Manhattan Miniature" feature, which opens with Ray Bloch's orchestra and choir singing "I Got the Sun in the Morning" from "Annie Get Your Gun." Bobby Doyle sings "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" from "Diamond Horseshoe" show, and the orchestra makes a mythical visit to Carnegie Hall to perform Kreisler's "Tambourin Chinois." Miss Froman also will be heard in "Coax Me a Little Bit" and "They Say It's Wonderful," and Doyle sings "You Are Too Beautiful." Orchestra and choir take center stage for "Love on a Greyhound Bus." Joe Besser provides the program's comedy, and Ted Husing is heard in sports headlines of the week.

BOB HAWK QUIZ

Dakota; U. S. Army Mason General Hospital, Brentwood, L. I., N. Y.; U. S. Naval Receiving Hospital, San Francisco, Calif.; and U. S. Marine Hospital, Louisville, Ky.

SPOTLIGHT BANDS
"Spotlight Bands" swings into the fourth week of its eight week cycle on behalf of Army recruiting, Monday, with Guy Lombardo and his orchestra sending "The Sweetest Music This Side of Heaven" over the Mutual air-waves (8:30-9 p.m., EST). The big-time airlines operator, "That Guy" Lombardo, invites MBS listeners for a free ride "Along With Me," which shows the leader of the Royal Canadians have chosen as the Spotlight "Tune of the Week." Other selections to get the Lombardo treatment include "Full Moon and Empty Arms," "Love

On a Greyhound Bus," "Always," "I Don't Know Why I Love You Like I Do," "Got the Sun in the Morning," and "That's For Me."

A single letter from Drummond (Ned Weaver) rescues Denny (Rod Henrickson) from his almost hopeless web of difficulties.
